

ACCOUNTING AND FINANCE

KNOW ACCOUNTING AND FINANCE

Accounting focuses on the management of financial reports and records such as book-keeping, managing balance sheets and income statements. These types of data are used to plan company finances to achieve business goals. There are 3 key areas in accounting, which are financial, cost accounting and management accounting.

- Financial accounting is used to keep track of a company's financial transactions while following standardised guidelines to record and summarise financial data in a report.
- Cost accounting collects financial information about a company's overall costs and evaluates the efficiency of its usage. From this, the administration can make informed decisions about the production capacity and other resources of the business.
- Management accounting plays a role in facilitating the management in making informed decisions regarding the economic resources, performance, and rate of return of the capital.

Finance deals with the management of money for businesses and organisations in terms of planning, organising and controlling finances. It involves a wide range of finance activities including investment, financial planning and commercial banking.

- Personal finance is the process of planning and managing one's finances by saving and investing via a budget and comprehensive strategy.
- Corporate finance involves dealing with the capital of a corporation to increase the value of a company through capital investments, capital financing and return of capital.
- Public finance, also known as government finance, is responsible for assessing government revenue and expenditure to achieve economic growth.
